The need and the possibility of being honest: Christian perspective.

Abstract

Christianity has always participated in the struggle for honesty and in promoting it through pointing to its timeless, supramundane, positive and fundamental value. This contribution on part of the followers of Christ is very precious and necessary also today. The article is an attempt to show some of the threads of this contribution of Christianity in showing and promoting honesty as a precious value for man and community and an invitation to further discussion on the need for honesty in life.
